Best budget decks hearthstone 2020

Last Updated Aug 12, 2019 at 2:20 AM By Cat General Information This page is all the budget and cheap decks we currently have on Icy Veins. Some are specially made with a low budget in mind (our basic decks for example), while others are variations of meta decks, where some expensive cards are cut (Legendary and Epic cards, most of the time) to make room for less expensive cards. You use the category and tag filters to further refine your selection. I have built Hearthstone budget decks for years and played budget decks to Legend in all recent expansions. At Scholomance Academy, I took budget decks a step further and achieved the high Legend x11 star bonus playing nothing but budget decks. In this post, I go through all the decks I've had success with. You also find gameplay videos of all decks on my Youtube channel, links to the specific videos are in the segments for each of the decks. People often ask me what the best budget deck is. That can be a difficult question to answer because most of these decks don't have large enough sample sizes to give definitive answers. I'm more comfortable giving you the rough layers the decks of the decks are in: the staples that are strong, reliable workhorses, the challengers that I've had good success with, but that lack of the hundreds of games needed to really understand them thoroughly, and the playable decks that I'm able to win at least half of my games with, but that I wouldn't easily recommend for climbing. The vast majority of budget coverage I've played go into a fourth category, the failures. When building decks, you end up playing more bad decks than good decks, but all that is needed to find the insights that make it possible to build the good decks. I will not show the failures in their full form, although I can refer to some of the lessons learned from them, as the case may be. With this introduction we will go deeper to the best budget decks in Hearthstone in Scholomance Academy! These decks are strong, proven, and I would love to take them up the ladder every day. Deck code: AAECAR8AD6gCtQOHBP4Mn6UD+68D/K8DorkD7oD3MwDm80Dos4DgtADxtEDudlDAA==Face Hunter is again one of the top quality archetypes in Scholomance Academy, and there is only a small difference in performance between the full-cost versions of the deck and the budget version. I've used this same budget list almost since the beginning of expansion, and it just keeps delivering. The secret package is always something you want tech for the meta you play against, but double Freezing Trap and Double Pressure Plate is very reliable almost in Scholomance Academy. I occasionally replace a Pressure Plate with an Explosive Trap when I meet a lot of Rogues, but Rogues aren't like that right now, so the basic package seems to be performing best. Hearthstone Top Decks: video: code: AAECaAlHAA+0AYwCycwPNA8YfAePhnP1pwP1pwO5uA0DA0k0QP+0QOK1APV1AF31MAIt cost me almost a hundred games to find a good Budget Rogue Budget Deck. There are pretty cheap ways to build a good Rogue deck with Greyheart Sage and Secret Passage, which is only four Epic cards, but I was convinced that there had to be a way to build one without them as well. The Self-Sharpening Sword, Vulpera Toin Blade, and Cutting Class weapon synergy package proved themselves early in testing, but I kept running out of resources before I was able to get the job done. After a detour with Budget Galakrond Rogue (which turned out to be OK too, but not as good as this), I was confident that some additional resource generation would be the solution. It took some fine-tuning, but the addition of Pharaoh Cat and EVIL Miscreant proved to be exactly the thing the deck needed to have enough resources to win the game. Compared to the meta Rogue decks, the budget Aggro Rogue is an amalgamation of Stealth and Weapon Rogue: it can't fully support either style, but creates its own mix between. Upgrading the deck would therefore mean making a choice to pursue one or the other. Hearthstone Top Decks: guide: code: AECAeasAwLmugPWvgMO/acD+a4DI7oD4LwD174D3r4D2cYD98gD+cgD/sgD3MwdgtADxtDI9UDAA==While Soul Demon Hunter is currently the most popular archetype, Aggro Demon Hunter is also still powerful. I have built several versions of the deck in the Scholomance Academy, and this is my current favorite. There are two basic ways to build the deck: with Skull of Gul'dan and Altruis the Outcast, or without them, but with Merowslicer. The Skull variant has more swing and comeback potential, while the Marrowslicer variant is even more aggressive. I see a lot of people building the deck with both Skull and Marrowslicer, but in my testing as early as August I found that solution unsatisfactory. Later statistics of meta-builds seem to indicate the same. After making that basic choice, there are also some tech slots to fill. I currently love Cult Neophyte and Frozen Shadoweaver as my tech cards. Frozen Shadoweaver is usually better than weapon removal (Ooze) in a pace deck, because freezing the opponent for a turn is often as good or even better than removing a weapon, and Shadoweaver can also freeze large accomplices if needed. Cult Neophyte can serve to buy time against many of the current meta decks, such as Druid and Mage. You want your tech cards to be good in as many matchups as possible. Hearthstone Top Decks: guide: are his that I believe in, but not as much as in the absolute top cover. Some of them lack a good sample size, others are more dependent on hitting the right meta. Some of them may be staples in the future with more testing. Deck code: AAECAZICAA+/A6d5gXDAP9pwpP/Cp5y9FXvgPvgPczAP5zAP5zGAGpG0Q050gMAEarty at Scholomance Academy. Glibberling Druid was perhaps the best budget deck. Unfortunately, the meta has evolved and Glibberling Druid has not proven to stand the test of time as good as Face Hunter. It's still a formidable deck, clocking in at an above 51% win rate in Diamond even today, but it's no longer a completely reliable climbing deck in higher grades. Hearthstone Top Decks: guide: code: AAECAZ8FA99CjAGeAcjErwe+maOOmgQOm9PXvgPKwQPCzAEZOP50QJMAPaladin is one of the big winners in Scholomance Academy, but a good budget Paladin deck proved elusive. Libram of Hope, High Abbess Alura, Lady Liadrin and Argent Braggart are such key cards in many of today's Paladin decks that it can be difficult to see how they can be replaced. Eventually I found the answer in Secrets. Secretkeeper, Mysterious Blade and Sunreaver Spy are still perfectly viable cards, they are just a little too weak compared to the current main Paladin archetypes, but they can still come together for some unexpected results. This is the deck I finished my Legend climb with in September. Hearthstone Top Decks: guide: code: AAECAaolAA/5A5YG4AbGmQ01QQ 2rQPbuAPXvgPevgOmywPczAPhZAPGPG0QPw1AMAI think Burn Shaman is underrated and I think the reason is that most people build the deck with the wrong strategy in mind. Sorcerous Substitute, for example, is a trap card that is unable to succeed in an archetype can fight for the board for a limited time only after which it must switch to direct damage spells to get the job done. The way I believe burn shaman should be built is to keep the curve very low and aggressive to maximize early minion pressure and then finish the job with spells. Expensive henchmen are a waste of space with that strategy in mind. Recently there have been a number of individual full-cost Burn Shaman decks that have adopted this philosophy and I have great confidence in the archetype should it be adopted more widely. I built this deck in early August and retested it in September to find it works even better in the current Hearthstone Top Decks: guide: code: AAECAaHAs0Dy8ADDrQBllwalB4+XANwA7muA/6uA6qvA86vA4Kx7m4A9a+A6TRA/7RAwA=After some time no Budget Aggro Rogue build, I returned to Budget Galakrond Rogue, and still found it a viable deck! (As it happens, the lessons learned from this deck led me to build an even better Aggro Rogue budget.) This take on Galakrond Rogue is not so heavily dependent on Galakrond itself, you see it more as a Questing Adventurer + Lackeys decks. The main sources are Lackeys that are generated from all Invoke cards: they give you minions, spells, buffs for Questing Adventurer, and goals for Faceless Corruptors. It is a fun deck to play, although the pure aggro approach seems slightly better. It's often a good idea to just win the game as fast as you do. Hearthstone Top Decks: guide: my experiments, I came across a number of archetypes that can win enough games to climb slowly, but that I can't seem to be good enough to really roll down the ladder. Deck code: AAECAa0GBtwB1gTcPlbA8/AA9IOAwzJBpmpA5+pA9qsA/KsA/6uA82vA5O6A5A6A66A/S7A9y+AwA=I really wanted to build a budget control deck. I realize it's a difficult task because Hearthstone is monetized, so control and combo decks are expensive. I tried different ideas, such as Big Warrior (doesn't work on a budget by the way), but the only class that had what it took is Priest. Budget Galakrond Priest is slower and more control-oriented than his more expensive relatives: with no Soul Mirror, Mindfayer Kaathij, or Murozond the Infinite to offer big swing turns and no stealing synergies available. Budget Galakrond Priest needs a slower, grindier style to play. It still requires four Epic maps to work: two copies of Sethekk Veilweaver (for value) and two copies of Plague of Death (for hard removal). Hearthstone Top Decks: guide: code: AAECAa0GALYKyMADdskG0wqCIAOZmwOhoQvppRPPQQQQQQQQQARAPY/APNWTOWUGOWugMAI also tried another priest variant, Resurrect Priest. When building Resurrect Priest on a budget, you lack some of the value of Archmage Vargoth and Catrina Muerte, and the best way to overcome that is to add Galakrond to the deck. I had moderate success with the deck and it seems playable, but not particularly strong. Hearthstone Top Decks: Guide: actually had some success playing my old Ashes of Outland Galakrond Zoo Warlock, but I'm still unsure what what are the best way to build a budget Warlock deck in Scholomance Academy. I think one can be found as the right list. Warrior decks are usually expensive and I'm skeptical about Pirate Warrior without Ancharr. I tried Big Warrior, but couldn't make it work on a budget. A cheap Mage deck seems impossible with as many key cards as Epic or Legendary. Scholomance Academy proved an OK extension for budget players. Voracious Reader only offers multiple viable decks, which can be a good thing, but also makes many of the decks play in a similar way. The meta is aggressive and swingy, and aggression works on a budget as well.
